ABSTRACT

This guide, an extension of the Vocational-Technical Education Consortium of States (V-TECS) catalog, includes such considerations as background information, decision-making skills, attitudes, and learning methods surrounding the occupations of bookkeeper/accountant/payroll clerk. The guide provides job-relevant task, performance objectives, performance guides, resources, learning activities, evaluation standards, and achievement testing for these occupations. The guide contains seven units that cover the following topics: management functions; recording entries in journals and ledgers; periodic accounting/reporting activities; general accounting-related activities; payroll activities; activities related to banking; and clerical-related activities. Appendixes to the guide provide a duty and task list, definitions of terms, a tool and equipment list, sources for standards, and a bibliography. (KC)

INTRODUCTION

V-TECS guides are an extension or continuation of the V-TECS catalogs. While the V-TECS catalog is a composition of duties, tasks, performance objectives, and performance guides, it deals only with the psychomotor aspect of an occupation. It is a blueprint of an occupation. It deals only with the identification of the "hands on" aspect of the occupation. It does not take into consideration such things as the background information surrounding a task, how to make inferences, generalizations and decisions from a body of knowledge, nor does it deal with attitudes, job seeking skills, safety or energy conservation practices. V-TECS guides take these aspects of teaching and learning into consideration.

Experience has shown that the art of learning can also be taught while teaching subject matter. People need to learn how to learn. V-TECS guides take into consideration how students learn and the guides are an efficient way for instructors to assist them to learn.

V-TECS guides are centered around all three domains of learning: psychomotor, cognitive, and affective. The following is a brief explanation of each.

Psychomotor

Any manipulative skill such as sharpening a pencil, operating a cash register or calculator, recording transactions in a journal, or writing a check are examples of manipulative or psychomotor skills. Tasks such as these are identified in V-TECS catalogs. V-TECS catalogs also group tasks by duties and objectives. Each performance objective has a performance standard which must be met to prove student proficiency in the manipulative aspect of the task. The V-TECS catalog, however, does not include any suggestions as to how to learn to do these tasks.

V-TECS guides are developed around psychomotor tasks which are worker oriented.

Cognitive

To perform psychomotor tasks, students must think. To record a transaction in a journal, students must know which accounts to debit and credit and in which journal columns to record the information. When posting, they must know the steps involved so that accounts will contain all necessary information. When writing a check, students must know how and where to record all information. At any rate, students must think about what is being done. This is cognition or a mental activity. Cognition is what goes on in the mind about any job being done. V-TECS guides provide the collateral knowledge and the impetus to apply cognition to psychomotor tasks.

Cognition, then, is that process by which information is stored and used. That voice that warns one of potential dangers is cognition. Anything that goes on in the mind is cognition. Students may become the best workers in their job; but if they fail to think a process through and apply their experience, they may become just one more statistic. Cognition tells the students to turn off equipment with movable parts before handling the machine, such as changing the ribbon or removing a paper jam on a calculator. However, cognition does not apply only to safety. Good cognition or thinking can help employees do a job better and quicker. V-TECS guides provide for the cognitive aspects of learning.

Affective

Curriculum writers, supervisors, and instructors often rail to assist students in acquiring a positive attitude toward themselves, their jobs, their school, or their fellow students. V-TECS guides seek to provide assistance to the instructor in achieving this positive attitude. It is difficult for the instructor to identify little bits and pieces of desirable behavior for every unit and often harder yet to teach them. In this area, students might be judged as to how well they clean up their work area, whether they clean up their work area, whether they show up to do the job on time, or whether they must be told several times to do something. Potential employers are interested in student attitude because persons angry at themselves or uncertain of themselves are often poor workers.

A student's ability to succeed on the first job and every job thereafter depends largely on attitude. If, for example, students have the attitude of "let someone else do it," they could be in trouble. Students using V-TECS guides will have activities dealing with how to get along with other students, supervisors, or staff members both in large and small groups.

USE OF V-TECS GUIDE

The guide is designed to provide job-relevant tasks, performance objectives, performance guides, resources, learning activities, evaluation standards and achievement testing in selected occupations.

A V-TECS guide is designed to be used with any teaching methods you may choose. If a lecture/demonstration method is best for you, you will find sufficient help to meet your needs. If you prefer to use discussions or other methods that require student participation, you will find ample help. Regardless of which method is successful for you, a V-TECS guide can save preparation time and offer innovative methods and procedures. For example, students may work either alone or in teams while in class and learn skills in direct relation to what is actually done on the job. This work also takes into consideration student attitudes, thinking skills, and mathematical reading skills.

The use of small groups in teaching can be helpful in two ways: (1) many students may feel inadequate due to their lack of background information in mechanical things; and (2) some students may feel that they are physically incompetent or lack the necessary background experiences. A successful program (course) can provide students with a sense of security by reinforcing positive attitudes while improving skill and knowledge of the subject. By allowing students to interact on a personal level, this task/learner-centered approach can achieve this. As students gain confidence and discover they are an essential part of a team engaged in the learning-teaching process, their confidence increases. In addition the student in this setting can learn to work without direct supervision. The use of the small-group method permits the instructor to vary instructional routines away from lecture or other full-class methods to activities for single students, pairs of students or any number so desired.

You will find suggestions for specific classroom activities. The activities are not meant to restrict you or your students, but only to suggest a variety of learning activities for each task statement. Please do not feel that you must take your students through all the activities.

EVALUATION

 $\underline{\underline{\text{Written:}}}$ Student will answer with 90 percent accuracy the following questions:

1. What is work delegation?

EVALUATION Con't.

2. What are the underlying reasons many supervisors do not delegate work?

Answers:

- 1. Delegation is the process of establishing and maintaining effective working arrangements between a manager and the people who report to him/her. Delegation results when the performance of specific work is entrusted to another, and the results are mutually understood.
- 2. Because they do not know how to go about it or else they are jealous and mistrusting of their subordinates' abilities to do the job. Supervisors fail to delegate because of several psychological motives—the fear of competition, the fear of losing credit and recognition, and the fear that their own shortcomings and weaknesses will be exposed.

- 4. The daily transactions for yesterday need to be input into the computer this morning.

EVALUATION Con't.

Method of Evaluation:

The task priority must be 100 percent correct. The task assignments must agree at least 90 percent.
